GOSPEL REFLECTION

A world without laws and regulations would be one of total chaos and anarchy. However, if not interpreted with a human touch and understanding, these laws and regulations could become tools for exploitation. In Jesus's time Jewish laws seem to have been used by some religious authorities to suit their personal advantage and interests. Hence, Jesus reminds them that to be true children of God they needed to be more than just doing the minimum demanded by law. Being a child of God is about going above and beyond the law to live a life of love. Our life is not just about preventing murder and other crimes but also about forgiveness and making peace. It is not enough we must stay away from committing adultery; rather we must treat others as reflections of God as against objects of sexual desire. Not only must we avoid false oaths, but we must also try to live a life of integrity and commitment. How often have we misused our privileges as children of God and spoken words that are neither just nor appropriate! We'd do well to think of the times we have criticized others or been mean to them. Everyday, every moment, we have choices to make. What will we choose today?

Congratulations to our Deacon, Tyrone Necaie, on his new assignment to serve in the ministry of Habitat for Humanity.
